FOREWORD

I am very grateful to the Year Book staff of Smallwood Collegiate for inviting me to write a Foreword on the theme "Progress in Labrador".

It is now over seventeen years since I became the Member for all of Labrador and even after I ceased being the Member I had many contacts with Labrador as the Minister of a number of Government Departments including, for a while, the Department of Labrador Affairs. Naturally I have watched the growth and development in Labrador with great interest.

In that time a highway has been built from the Quebec border on the Coast, joining up all the settlements as far as Red Bay - a distance of over 70 miles.

In the Happy Valley - Goose Bay - Northwest River area another 38 miles of road have been built, of which 8 miles have been paved. Many local roads have been built, or rebuilt, in many places like Cartwright, Hopedale and so on. A car ferry has been established across the Strait of Belle Isle to connect Labrador and the Island of Newfoundland.

In 1952 not one community in Labrador, apart from Goose Airport, had electricity. Today some two dozen communities have electricity and plans are afoot to give this service to every community of any fair size. The same thing applies to telephonic communications of one kind or another.

Since 1952 seven hospitals, including the great Jackman Hospital in Labrador City, have been built, as well as a number of Nursing Stations.

So far I have said nothing of the great Mining and Water Power Developments in western and central Labrador. Indeed students in Smallwood Collegiate know just as much about that as I do now, although they would not be so familiar as I am with the years of effort and planning that brought about these developments. About all that I need say is that these tremendous enterprises, among the greatest of their kind in the world, and now giving a good livelihood to thousands of people, did not come about by chance.

I should not end this article without stating that while, on looking back, we can see that there has been great progress in spite of the difficulties of geography and climate, yet much remains to be done. There must be more centralization of our people of coastal Labrador, if they are to enjoy the benefits that most of us now take for granted. Fishery operations must be modernized if they are to be competitive; the great forest resources must be utilized in the interests of our people; all of Labrador, but especially large industrial towns, must have a road system connecting them with the rest of the world, and so I could go on. But with hard work and faith in ourselves and in our future, these things will come.

To all of you congratulations on what you have done and my best wishes for another good year.

As President of the Student Council this year, I had an opportunity to observe the attitudes of our students. While it is true that there is a small core of students in our school who willingly assist and cooperate in all students' activities, the number is far too small. I feel that there are many students who have the potential to make worthwhile contributions; however for some reason, perhaps apathy, they do not do so.

My hope for the coming years is that there will be a greater number of students accepting the responsibilities which are a part of school life.

On behalf of the council, I would like to wish the graduating class the best of luck in their future undertakings.

JOSEPH G. ROUSSEAU JR. - Principal

This year I intend to deviate from the standard-type Principal's message. For once, instead of telling you how fortunate you have been to have this school, its facilities, its teachers, etc., I would like to tell you what a pleasure it has been to have had you as students.

Undoubtedly you would be the first to agree that you have not all been paragons of virtue; conversely, you have not all been that much trouble either; Oh sure, we have had a few brief encounters from time to time (I like to think we have agreed to disagree on certain matters), and perhaps you feel you have lost more than your share of these encounters. Certainly our intention has not been to subjugate you to our wishes but rather we have tried to appeal to your sense of responsibility and common sense with the hope thereby to educate you in the broadest and truest sense possible.

I have said to myself on numerous occasions, and even to some of you on a few occasions: "He has developed into a real young man, or she has developed into a real young lady." And, Grads of '70, I can pay you no greater compliment than this.

The world outside awaits you. While I will be the first to admit we have not made it exactly to your specifications, we have done as well as we can do. Now it is up to you. And please remember, in aspiring to redesign our present world to your specifications, someone else will follow you. So exercise your rights, duties and obligations as a member of society with reasonableness and restraint and according to the Christian values we have introduced you to over the past few years.

It has been a pleasure working with you during the past semester and I am looking forward to a cooperative effort on all our parts to make the coming year a satisfying and successful one for all of us.

To the graduating class especially, I wish success in their endeavors and hope that they will give us the benefit of their years at Sacred Heart by feeling free to discuss with the administration and staff our shortcomings and by suggesting improvements so as to perpetuate the education of those who follow them.

Thank you for providing me this opportunity to convey a message to you through your yearbook.

You are candidates for an "Adult Society". What does this society have to offer? Are you adequately prepared for the future through your formative years at school? Let us pause to analyze the present and get a glimpse of the future.

The code of ethics and the social standards of our present society are subjected to much criticism. I have no objection to healthful criticism or change for that matter. What disturbs me are the methods employed by our youth in their determination to upset, rather than change, our accepted standards of today's society. Do these young people want "change" just for the "sake of change"? Are they prepared to offer something better? Criticism and destruction without motive for improvement indicates misguided efforts and a lack of foresight.

Being more specific, our youth of today possess behavioral patterns and attitudes that are distasteful. It is easy to detect this lack of respect for what has been accomplished in the past. So, you don't like our governments and universities! Does this give you the right to perform willful destruction and inflict personal injury? Please remember that it took thousands of years and many generations to establish our present culture. Studies in the social sciences and literature have familiarized you with the lives of many capable men through the ages; their devotion and dedication to mankind and its betterment. Anyone would agree that there could be an adjustment problem in keeping pace with the times. Are we naive enough to believe that total destruction is the answer? The burden rests with you.

To the graduating class, I wish you every success in the years ahead.

RAYMOND ROSE
Principal, High School

amalgamated

It gives me great pleasure to write this short note for your yearbook. Better than most of you, I remember the "Kingdom of Mud" that was Wabush, and saw the bulldozer initially break the turf on most of the townsite. It gives me a sense of accomplishment and pride to be part of such a venture.

The pursuit of knowledge, a love of learning, and an appreciation of the esthetic set in a framework of religious and moral values are the real measure of a civilization. As students you pursue the best our heritage can offer and therefore you stand in the forefront of this bold attempt of ours to roll back the wilderness.

The value of co-operation is exemplified in the way both schools have worked together to make this yearbook a success. To the graduates of both schools I offer my very best wishes and personal regards.
